Join PREP Autism/Behavior Consultant, Laura Wolf, for a parent workshop that explores the evidence-based practice of "Social Stories" and how they can support the social skills development of neurodivergent children.

Social Stories are unique narrative interventions designed to guide neurodivergent individuals through various social situations. Often referred to as social scripts or social narratives, these stories provide a structured and visual framework for understanding and navigating the complexities of social interactions. In this workshop, Laura Wolf will explain the Social Story Formula and its practical application in supporting the social and emotional well-being of neurodivergent children.

Participants will gain a comprehensive understanding of the Social Story method and acquire practical tools to implement this evidence-based strategy at home.
